"giving women support to support themselves"

Free The Girls uses donated bras to provide sustainable employment to women rescued from sex trafficking in developing countries like Mozambique, Uganda, and El Salvador. Women in our program earn a living selling bras in the second-hand clothing markets prevalent in developing countries. The bras are donated by women in this country, who typically have a few ill-fitting, uncomfortable bras stashed in the back of their lingerie drawer. Rather than sending these bras to the local landfill, women who donate their gently-used bras to Free The Girls support our programs providing sustainable employment to survivors of sex trafficking in developing countries.

FREE THE GIRLS is a cause focused company with a mission to raise awareness about human trafficking, to create job opportunities for former slaves, and to help fund rescue efforts to free more slaves.
